Expected Graduation: Masters, Class of 2018

I am a master's student in public policy with a concentration in energy and transportation policy. I have taken many courses with a focus on policy evaluation and outcomes, and energy policies. In one class, I adjusted the EPA's budget and justified changes in the form of a mock Congressional hearing. In another class, I deepened my understanding of how citizens engage with dialogue about environmental policy and presented on relevant research highlighting the effectiveness of nudging in policy framework. This knowledge will help me critically engage with professionals to better shape my next year of studies and future career.

Attending this conference will not only expand my knowledge on best practices for implementing energy efficiency programs but also help me make the most of my energy policy classes in the upcoming academic year. By talking with professionals and attending workshops on current issues in the energy sector and emerging technologies, I can better analyze energy policies and actively engage in forward-thinking discussions with my classmates and professors. Finally, attending this conference will allow me to network with professionals and help shape my specific careers goals for post-graduation.
